Frank Frølich has resigned from the police and started as a private investigator. After an assignment in Østfold, in a mall, over a coffee cup, he meets Mathilde, who soon thereafter becomes the woman in his life. Mathilde has a girlfriend who works at a refugee center, and needs help finding an Iraqi girl whose younger sister lives at the center.

Frank reluctantly takes on the assignment, and immediately begins work to close the case. Soon after, well-known author Fredrik Andersen appears at his office and asks him to stop the search, but does not want to say why. The following morning, the author is found murdered in his home at Nordstrand in Oslo.

The hunt continues in two directions: Who is the mysterious sister of the girl? And why was Fredrik Andersen killed? Meanwhile, hidden forces sabotages Frank Frølich's work. And the police shy away.
