Peter Serck

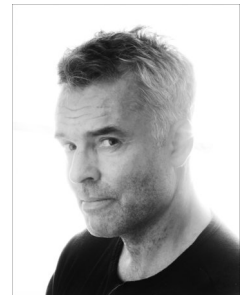

Lea's face

This narrative takes place in Oslo's artistic environment in the 70s. Serck's sixteenth novel is a suggestive depiction of young love that offends conservative conventions and the merciless conditions of the art scene.

A young aspiring author falls in love with the somewhat older sculptor Lea, who is beautiful and charming, but also an alcoholic harbouring a death wish. All the while, his father strongly warns him against continuing the relationship.

Peter Serck

Peter Serck (b. 1957) wrote his first novel called The tenant in 1982. He has written a number of novels since, and his work has been much praised by the critics.
