What we believe in

Perhaps the title of this book ought to have been "What we used to believe in", thus stating how our pre-Christian religion no longer exists. Though that would not be entirely correct. We still hear and read about the Sámi noaidi – the Saami shamans today. Some have even chosen to come forward to tell the stories about their special abilities. In this book we will not meet the present-day noaidi, but rather learn what they represented before Christianity made its way into Sápmi (Sámiland).

Aage Solbakk

Aage Solbakk (1943) born and raised in Deatnu/Tana, Norway. He lives near the Deatnu/Tana River and lives there as a salmon fisherman, wilderness practitioner and textbook author. His PhD in and passion for history shine through in his books, research and textbooks he has published so far. He has been working as an editor for Sámi publishing for many years.
