Helga West

I thought the snow was white

This is a complete story from the marriage to the divorce. It deals with the doubts that are there, even before the marriage, the feeling of being alienated when one marries another belonging to another culture, the loss and rediscovery of one's own identity and the displacement you feel when you know that things have gone completely wrong.

Helga West

Helga West is born in 1986, is from the village Savvon on the Finnish side of the Tana river valley. She has a master's in theology and works as a freelance editor. The book is her first collection of poems.
