Jonny Halberg

The Twin

After spending years as an unsuccessful financier, Adam Egeberg returns to his childhood home to find his mother disappeared and his brother, who is retarded, in shock. Weighed down by guilt over his absence for so many years, he leaves for Straume, the village of his father's family and he takes his brother along with him. Straume is apparently a real backwater in the river of time, but only apparently so. The path on which the two brothers now embark takes them on an edifying journey to the past.

As in all of Halberg's books, the past catches up with people when they least expect it. Adam is forced to make choices that he has avoided all his life.

Jonny Halberg

Jonny Halberg made his debut with the collection of short stories Transition to the Tertiary in 1989, since when he has published a number of collections of short stories, novels and film manuscripts. Halberg has been awarded several literary prizes, including the Critics' Prize and the Hunger Prize as well as the P2 Listeners' novel prize.
