Erna Osland

Decide, Tony T, Decide!

An engaging story about escape and taking action. Suitable for readers from 12 and up.

It's the summer holidays, and Tony is staying at his grandpa's with his cousin, Silja. Every should be as normal, but nothing is. The police tell them that a young asylum seeker is missing and everyone presumes the boy has drowned. But what's going on in Grandpa's loft? And who is hiding what? Have Silja and Grandpa discovered something? For the first time, Tony has to decide for himself what is right and wrong, and he has to quite literally throw himself in at the deep end.

Author Erna Osland and illustrator Sigbjørn Lilleng have together created an illustrated easy-reader about right and wrong, and everything in between.

The story and illustrations are designed to encourage youngsters to read.
